SORTATION CODE

THE PRESENT EDITION.

THE Publishers regret that the unexpected number of orders received after Section I. had been printed off, has exhausted the Jubilee issue, and the Edition cannot be reprinted. For this reason many intending purchasers may be disappointed.

In the circumstances an additional number of Section II. which contains the full Postal addresses of all Rural Occupants have been printed for separate sale, and especially for parties issuing circulars from that part of the work.

A few additional Copies of Section III. and Appendix have likewise been printed as a separate book (see Advertisement before the Title of the Section.)

NEXT EDITION.

As THE arrangements for the next Edition (see Advertisement at Title of Section III) may depend upon the probable number of intending Subscribers—the work not being printed from standing type, and the cost of production being great—the Publishers will be glad to register the addresses of any who may intimate by post-card their intention of subscribing for a more frequent issue.

All such addresses should reach them at once, or not later than December 1894. To these printed information may be sent when advisable to obviate the necessity for constant inquiries, which cannot be satisfactorily answered by ordinary correspondence.

MEMO. | to

HOW THE COUNTY DIRECTORY WAS COMPILED.

THERE is no other Directory in the Kingdom corresponding to the County Directory of Scotland—none that give Noblemen's Seats and Rural Residences, and such particulars as Postal Addresses and Telegraph Offices (with distances), and Occupants. It is not a Business Directory—giving only certain professional and official names in Towns and Villages. It gives every Rural Residence of any importance, the Occupant of which cannot conveniently be found within the Postal Delivery, under the name of a Post Town only. The compilation of the 10th edition required, as a basis, the preliminary distribution of the former entries in Part I. [above 40,000] throughout the various Post Offices of the Country, which are about 1770. One-half that number are Telegraph Offices, serving other local Post Towns, and many entries under the latter are, according to their relation, under different Telegraph Offices. To grapple with a chronicle of five times as many facts which a record of Residence, Post Town, Telegraph Office, Distance, and Occupant involved, necessitated the adoption of some plan by which accuracy should be assured, and reference and orderly arrangement facilitated. The mere marshalling of such data, and the introduction of fresh information, gathered from the most varied sources, demanded more than ordinary diligence and scrupulous care, but by the system adopted that work was so far reduced to a mechanical process, that much unskilled labour could be introduced absolutely without risk.

SECTION I.

As applied to Sections I. and III., the Chromatic Sortation Code methodically placed the respective entries on a sequence of docketts, the colourings and references of which designated and individualised each, in respect to their description and place—no two being identical—and every one so indicating column and line of its particular entry as to make it easily found. These docketts carrying partially attached duplicate entries, after sortation under their respective Post Towns, had their duplicates transferred to Postmaster's sheets in corresponding alphabetical order. On the return of the latter, and the receipt of information from all sources, the docketts were corrected for the printer. These, after remaining for a time, and for certain purposes under various divisions, were returned to their original order through a series of sortations—first, by their paper colours, and then by their pips, edgings, bars, and alphabetical references; and, when checked, were all found in orderly relation, none being amissing. Provision had to be made for placing new entries, and numerous transfers, caused by changed names of residences, &c. These were set in after the removal of deletions and temporary substitutes for transfers.

SECTION II.

In Section II., the same Code made provision for the easier return of the transposed entries to the original columns of the New Edition, from which that Section was compiled by the transposition of the entries in Section I., and for at once tracing any torn or mutilated entry which might not be identified by the clipping itself, and ensuring every entry in Section I. being docketed for Section II.

SECTION III.

Section III. necessitated the introduction of the Minor Billets of the Chromatic System to enable all the sub-entries to be first carefully compared with official lists dealing with the various series, and which were brought into position beside their chief docketts by their Code markings under their respective Towns, Villages, Parishes, &c., the order of precedence being also indicated. These Minor Billets, differentiated according to their series, were further individualised according to such numbers as had been officially assigned them.

* Giles' Improvements in indexing and cataloguing. Patent No. 195791. Sealed 19th April 1892. 10 pp. 8d. Sold at the Patent Office, 38 Cursitor Street, Chancery Lane, London.

ARTHUR GILES, COUNTY DIRECTORY OFFICE, 107 PRINCES ST., EDINBURGH.

PREFACE.

IN preparing the Tenth Edition of the COUNTY DIRECTORY OF SCOTLAND the Publishers have aimed at giving the Public as accurate a Book of Reference as in the circumstances was possible. Its collaboration has demanded much care and required the closest attention, every former entry having had to be minutely examined, and a very large number of new ones requiring to be added, the volume being again further enlarged by eighty pages. In so far as changes of any kind could be ascertained, or inaccuracies corrected by correspondence or reference to authorities, the editors have endeavoured to give effect to the same, the rural information having been chiefly obtained through several hundred Postmasters.

Many circumstances have contributed to delay the date of issue, but such has generally been the experience of the book even at the beginning, fifty years ago, when the volume was less than a third of the present, and the contents scarcely a sixth, with no such varied information and differentiation of Post Towns and Telegraph Offices as now characterises the First and Third Sections. It is only necessary, therefore, to say here that the editors have been continuously engaged in the compilation ever since it was promised to the public. In the features of the present issue are included all those which from time to time have been introduced into former editions.

It is hoped that the limitation of Sections I. and II. to Mansions and Rural Residences, and the transference of other entries to a third section, will meet with general approval. In the latter every Place, Parish, and Island mentioned in the Census Tables, 1891, have been included. Care has also been taken to insure the correctness of small type entries by comparison with the latest official lists of the respective professions and official papers, besides direct communication with every legal and medical practitioner. In the present edition, all the Solicitors, as well as the Notaries-Public in Scotland, have been incorporated in Section III., also County Council Clerks, District Clerks, and Medical Officers, and Clerks to School Boards. Professional names in the Cities of Aberdeen, Dundee, Edinburgh, Glasgow, and the Town of Greenock are again omitted, as directories for these places are published annually.

A number of new Sub-Post Offices, Postal and Railway Telegraph Offices, and Railway Stations have been inserted, and additional Telegraphic information appertaining to offices supplied. The Appendix has been extended by the introduction of a list of the Provosts of Royal, Parliamentary, and Police Burghs (partly transferred from Section I.), with their respective periods of office, Chairmen of Parochial Boards, Conveners of County Councils, and District Chairmen; Stipendiary Officials only being included in Section III.

There has also been added the population of Counties and Civil Parishes subsequent to the Report of the Boundary Commissioners.

To the Post Office Authorities the Publishers have to express their grateful thanks for their invaluable recognition and support during the production of the work, without which, and the cordial co-operation of the Postmasters of Scotland, the issue of a County Directory would not be practicable.

To the Noblemen and Gentlemen who have favoured them with information the Publishers are much indebted, and to all such they now beg respectfully to express their sincere thanks.

Telegraphic Address:
'GILES, EDINBURGH.'

EXPLANATIONS.

THE present edition of this work has, like the preceding, been compiled for the combined purpose of a Postal and Telegraph Directory; and attention is specially called to the following particulars.

The number of new residences submitted by the various Postmasters was so large that it was found expedient to divide the work into three Sections, as follows:—

SECTION I. RESIDENCES AND OCCUPANTS.

„ II. OCCUPANTS AND RESIDENCES.

„ III. TOWNS AND VILLAGES: PARISHES, &c.

In Section I. the name of the residence comes first, then follows the postal address, between the colons, and lastly the name of the owner or occupant. (The places printed in italics are in every instance Telegraph Offices, besides forming part of the postal address, see below.)

As a general rule, the last word in the address of every letter, &c., should be the name of the Post Office from which the letter is to be delivered, and the Directory has been prepared with this view, giving in each case the postal address a letter should bear. The name of the county is added in those instances in which it is requisite or desirable that this should form part of the address.

In Section II. the order is reversed, the name of the owner or occupant appearing first, followed by the name of the residence and postal address.

In Section III. are given the names of the Towns, Villages, Hamlets, and Inhabited Islands, Railway Stations, and Parishes in Scotland. The names of the Post Towns and Sub-Post Offices (Money Order, Savings Bank, and Insurance and Annuity Offices being distinguished by means of an asterisk) are inserted in the order in which they occur in the alphabetical arrangement. Where Money Order business is not transacted, the name of the nearest Money Order Office is given.

The names of the Postal Telegraph Offices at which Telegraph business is conducted by officers of the Post Office—as well as Railway Stations at which Telegrams are collected and delivered by the Railway Companies on behalf of the Postmaster-General—are also printed as they occur in the alphabetical arrangement; and the hours of attendance on week days and Sundays are in each case appended.

At the Railway Stations where Messages can only be received for transmission, but from which there is no delivery, the circumstance is noted by the words “Collecting Office only.”

In tendering messages for transmission, the senders are expected to state, as accurately as possible, the distance at which the addressees live from the terminal Telegraph Office, so that the charge for portorage, if any, may be ascertained. The Directory has been compiled with a special view to supply this information, although it is not to be considered as an official authority for deciding cases of disputed distance. The distances have in every case been given, as far as it has been possible to ascertain them, to the nearest quarter of a mile, but as the fractional part of a mile counts as a full mile for portorage purposes, any discrepancy which does not involve the question of a whole additional mile (over the first) does not affect the cost of delivery. For instance, the charge (viz. 6d.) for delivering at a place which is only $1\frac{1}{4}$ mile from a Telegraph Office, although the entry in the Directory may make it $1\frac{3}{4}$ or 2 miles, will be the same as if the exact distance had been stated.

EXPLANATIONS AND ABBREVIATIONS.

For further particulars as regards Postal and Telegraph regulations, see Appendix at the end of the Directory.

Explanatory Notes are given at the beginning of the respective Sections, and also at the end of Sections 1 and 3.

SCOTT'S

MIDLOTHIAN

UNEQUALLED. OAT FLOUR.

The most wholesome and nutritious article of diet known to the Medical Faculty for all. Richer in bone and flesh-forming properties than any other Food. Powerful Brain and Nerve Strengtheners, easily digested.

The following report by Dr Bartlett of London, shows that SCOTT'S MIDLOTHIAN OAT FLOUR is very rich in Bone-making material, containing, as it does, Phosphoric Acid in Ash '87, Potash '37; of these, ordinary Flour contains none.

Copy of Report by H. C. BARTLETT, Ph.D., F.C.S., 39 Duke Street, Grosvenor Square, London, W. :—'I have made a series of very careful analyses of SCOTT'S MIDLOTHIAN OAT FLOUR. These show remarkable proportions of bone-forming matter, and greatly exceed those found in Wheat Meal and Flour. The results are highly satisfactory, and your preparation is the best I have ever examined.'

It is highly recommended and used by eminent Physicians.

Perfect Antidote for Anæmia.

Best Food of the day for the Complexion.

Constantly used in Leading Hydropathic Establishments.

THE COUNTY DIRECTORY OF SCOTLAND.

SECTION I.

RESIDENCES AND NAMES OF OCCUPANTS,

WITH THEIR

POSTAL AND TELEGRAPHIC ADDRESSES.

The Postal Address of a Residence is given between the Colons, the name of a Post Office printed in ITALICS, signifying that it is also the Telegraph Office.

When the Post Town and Telegraph Office are not identical, the nearest Telegraph Office is added in ITALICS at the end of the entry, after the Letters T. O.

Figures following the name of a Telegraph Office indicate its distance in miles from the Residence. A Cypher (0) means that the distance is under one mile.

When an entry is printed in Small Type, and the Postal Address and Telegraph Office are not stated, they are the same as in the preceding entry.

Rural Hotels and Commercial Establishments printed in Small Type are not repeated in Section II.

Where the Post Town, or Telegraph Office of a place, does not agree with the information given in Section III., the latter is the more correct, having been revised at a later date, during the progress of the work through the press.

SEE BEGINNING OF SECTION III. FOR EXPLANATORY NOTES RELATIVE THERETO.
